Software

One of the broadest collections at the Physical Archives is the software collection. With formats ever-changing, the collection includes a variety of obsolete media that are otherwise inaccessible through emulation on the Internet Archive. Individuals with personal collections of specific programs, media types, or eras of software often donate their collections so they can be preserved. We also receive donations from institutions dedicated to preserving technological history.

The Media of the Physical Archives

The Physical Archives are home to countless collections of nearly every media type. Here you will find distinct examples from our miscellaneous donations of physical media. These donations come from donors seeking a preservation home for their various collections of media. We categorize these donations into folders by media type and store similar media in the same location and easily retrieve them.
